Award-winning professor denied tenure

By Kendra Helmer
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Assistant chemistry professor Rick Gaston was recently honored by the graduate student organization for his excellence in teaching. Gaston also was recently denied tenure and is looking for a new job.

Gaston, an SIUC professor for seven years, received the Graduate and Professional Student Council's annual award for outstanding contribution to graduate and professional students at SIUC last week.

"Members of GPSC nominate people for the award," Fred Jacobs,

GPSC Chemistry Department representative, said. "I'm very glad to see that the award was given to someone who has such an effect on students."

Despite his recognition for excellence in teaching, Gaston was denied tenure. He said this will be his last semester at SIUC.

The decision to deny Gaston tenure was made by a vote of tenured faculty in the Chemistry Department. Chemistry professor Steve Scheiner said he was the chemistry chairman at the time the decision was made.

"It was recognized that Dr.

Gaston is a very effective instructor at the undergraduate level," he said. "However, faculty in our department are also expected to be effective at the graduate level."

"We expect that in addition to being a good undergraduate instructor, one should publish research papers in his discipline and seek external funding for research. Dr. Gaston did very little publication in peer review journals and did not do much seeking of external grants."

Gaston said the quality of teaching is more important than the amount of money someone can bring in to the University.

"I understand to a certain extent that at a research institution, which SIUC tries to be, you should try to bring in funding," Gaston said. "But I decided to spend the majority of my time teaching."

"I would rather spend my time making an undergraduate student excited about chemistry, because if you can't do that, then what purpose do you serve?"

Gaston was nominated for the award by his research assistant, Suzy Hartmann, a graduate student in chemistry.

Dead trees to be cut during break

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Most of the trees in Thompson Woods posing a danger to pedestrians will be removed over spring break, the SIUC superintendent of grounds says.

"I am putting together a plan to remove the dead trees over spring break when the traffic is low through the forest," Bruce Francis, superintendent of grounds, said.

Francis said, because of the dangers of falling trees, a decision was made after an on-going discussion to remove the trees.

"Many of the trees are very dangerous. Some of them have even fallen, so it has forced us to remove them," he said. "It's a liability situation."

Francis also said the exact number of trees to be cut is not known, but he said he plans to remove unnecessary brush and leave the dead trees on the floor of the woods.

He said some of the pathways will be barricaded during the break to protect pedestrians who might be walking on a pathway that a tree could fall on after being cut down.

Philip Robertson, a professor of plant biology and chair of the Thompson Woods Management Plan, said the renovation of Thompson Woods is a "necessary evil."

"For safety, removing the trees is desirable. But for ecological reasons it is undesirable," he said. "In a natural forest, it would be fine to leave the dead trees, but some of those trees are in really bad shape and could cause injury."

Dave Beals, a junior in Geology from Tinley Park and treasurer for the Student Environmental Center, said the removal of the trees would be better than a lawsuit.

"I can understand the problems of having dead trees in an area where a lot of people walk," he said.

RSO funding deadline extended

By Signe Skirion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The deadline for funding applications of registered student organizations has been extended to give group leaders a chance to complete the new forms, Undergraduate Student Government members say.

The deadline has been moved to March 19 because the new funding applications are different from past years and are causing difficulties for some RSOs, a USG senator said.

Eric Bottom, finance committee chairman and College of Business senator, said the USG executive committee recommended that the finance committee consider the extension to help RSO leaders who are having difficulties filling out the new funding applications.

USG President Kim Clemens said the organization leaders have been asking questions about the new forms.

Clemens said RSOs have expressed confusion about the new applications because the forms call for more information to be given by the organizations before the groups can be considered for funding.

"These new forms are very comprehensive — much more so than in the past," Clemens said. "There are more checks and balances to the forms that are causing some understandable confusion for the RSOs."

Clemens said with the new forms,

JAPANESE FIND U.S. SERVICEMEN GUILTY OF RAPE — YOKOSUKA, Japan—The three U.S. servicemen convicted Thursday in last September's rape of a 12-year-old Okinawan girl will soon be making bedspreads or business cards in a prison factory here. U.S. Navy Seaman Marcus Gill and U.S. Marine Pfc. Rodrico Harp were sentenced Thursday to seven years in prison, and Marine Pfc. Kendrick Ledet was sentenced to 6 years for the violent abduction and rape. The three will join 19 uniformed U.S. military personnel, plus the 20-year-old son of a serviceman — all convicts at the Yokosuka Prison, about 40 miles south of Tokyo. All American military personnel and family members who are convicted of crimes in Japan are sent to this small, two-story, concrete prison. Gill, Harp and Ledet are expected to appeal their sentences. But in the Japanese court system, their chances of a reversal are extremely remote, as is any chance of parole.

ITALY IGNORES U.S. COMPLAINTS OF TERRORIST — ROME—Italy's government has shrugged off U.S. complaints about the release and escape of a convicted terrorist, with officials saying only that Italian law requires prison officials to grant the convict temporary leave. The escape, Youssef Magid Molqi, a participant in the 1985 hijacking of the Achille Lauro cruise ship, "is probably quite far from Italy by now," an Italian Foreign Ministry official said Thursday. Molqi was held responsible for the shooting death of American passenger Leon Klinghoffer. Klinghoffer's body and wheelchair were tossed overboard after he was shot on deck. Last week, prison officials released Molqi for a 12-day good-conduct leave.

NAFTA'S IMPACT IS FALLING BELOW EXPECTATIONS — WASHINGTON—The North American Free Trade Agreement has worked out a lot less smashingly than President Clinton predicted it would — and the critics, led by Republican presidential candidate Patrick J. Buchanan, are relishing their I-told-you-so's. The clearest manifestation of the NAFTA letdown is depicted in the U.S. merchandise trade balance with Mexico, which deteriorated from a $1.3 billion surplus in 1994 to a record $15.4 billion deficit last year, as exports of U.S. goods to Mexico fell 9 percent and imports from Mexico rose 25 percent. Buchanan cites these figures to support his claim that "300,000 jobs went south last year" because of NAFTA.

DEMOCRATS REJECT EXTENSION OF WHITEWATER — WASHINGTON—Senate Whitewater committee Chairman Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., Thursday offered to limit his proposal for an open-ended extension of the panel's probe but vowed to use another staging arena for Whitewater hearings if Democrats continue to block his plans. Democrats, who have offered a shorter extension, promptly rejected D'Amato's proposal, saying it would extend the investigation well into the presidential campaign with the aim of embarrassing President Clinton. D'Amato also came under a new round of fire from Democrats as Minority Leader Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.D., strongly objected to D'Amato's continuation as chairman in light of the prominent role he has in Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

Corrections/Clarifications

In Wednesday's paper, the last sentence in Ester J. Cepeda Vander Mey's letter to the editors was incorrectly presented. The sentence should have stated, "But that's OK, I'd rather get a scholarship or get hired for a job based on my intelligence, not on the color of my skin."

In Thursday's paper, the article "USG passes fee-like resolution," it was incorrectly reported that a fee increase was implemented. The increase must first be approved by the SIU Board of Trustees.

SIUC to offer free tax filing

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

With tax time quickly approaching, an SIUC student group is offering free filing assistance with a feature offered at no other school in the state, the group's coordinator says.

Chris Becker, coordinator for the Volunteer Tax Assistance Program (VTA) and member of Beta Alpha Psi, said that for the first time, SIUC students and area residents who qualify can file their taxes electronically, and SIUC is the only University program in the state to offer this service.

"Each semester, we try to do a community service project," he said. "We are the only school in Illinois to offer free electronic refund filing. We worked hard to get this for the community, so being able to say that we are the only one in the state is an accomplishment."

Randy Hahn, associate professor of accounting, said electronic filing offers a glimpse of the future for those who are able to take advantage of it.

"This is the wave of the future," he said. "It is ideal for those in a situation where they may be receiving a refund. It is a special opportunity for students: You just file and have your return in ten days; it is very fast."

Allan Karnes, accounting director, said Beta Alpha Psi, a national accounting fraternity that annually participates in VTA, has worked hard to get the program certified. He said it also offers good experience to the students involved.

"They do a great job at this every year," he said. "Being the only school in the state to be able to offer this shows how hard they worked. They come out ahead in the sense that they gain a good deal of experience while here at school."

Students who volunteer are required to attend a training course taught by the Internal Revenue Service. At the completion of the course, students are tested and then certified to offer tax form assistance, Becker said.

Tax assistance can be obtained every Monday in the Student Center Activity Room C from 5 p.m.-7 p.m., and every Tuesday at the Carbondale Public Library from 2:30 p.m.-4:30 p.m. until April 16.

Becker said although the assistance is free to everyone, not all people may be able to use the service due to their tax status or income tax bracket.

"We primarily want to serve low-income students, elderly and the handicapped," he said.

"There is a limit to what we can do. For those we can not help, we try to tell them what to look for elsewhere," Becker said.

International students who have worked in the last year also will be able to take advantage of VTA, with one restriction, Becker said.

"We can do the 1040 IR for international students," he said. "Unfortunately, we can not electronically file for the international students. This should not deter anyone to come in and get the free assistance."

SIUE investigates phony phone bill

By Donita Polly
DE Politics Editor

Some SIUE students bypassed the school's telephone billing system and charged more than $1.1 million to the school during a two-year period, University officials say. Some students at the Edwardsville campus have admitted to the University that they made the fraudulent phone calls and will only have to pay for the charges they made. Students who did not come forward and are caught could face criminal charges and administrative sanctions.

Sam Smith, director of SIUE News Services, said there were problems with the way the University telephone switch was programmed, and students were able to bypass it and charge long-distance calls to the University.

He said the fraudulent phone calls began in fall 1993, and SIUE officials became aware of the phone calls in September 1995. He said about 1,500 students who lived in University Housing at SIUE made the fraudulent long-distance phone calls.

Smith said the University's police investigated the matter and had a list that they researched and cross-referenced to the buildings the phone calls were made from. He said SIUE then sent a letter in early

"They (the police) ... have a good idea of where and who the calls were made to."

December to 2,700 students who lived in University Housing when the phone calls were made.

"They (the police) checked the buildings and have a good idea of where and who the calls were made to," Smith said.

SIUE created an amnesty program in December that let the students who made the phone calls turn themselves in to the University before the Feb. 29 midnight deadline. With the program, students who charged their phone calls to the University could make arrangements to repay their charges without fear of punitive, civil or University action against them.

Board of Trustees to vote on new budget

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

To counteract effects of enrollment shortfalls at SIUC, President Ted Sanders says it is important for the SIU Board of Trustees to pass his proposed budget guidelines at the board's meeting next week.

Sanders presented his guidelines, along with his five priorities, for the University budget to the board at its February meeting.

Sanders said it is important that the budget guidelines be passed at the meeting, so enrollment shortfalls and other issues can be addressed. He said timing is important because the University needs to have a working budget by July 1.

"It actually becomes more harmful if we delay the decision into the fiscal year because we have fewer months to make necessary decisions," Sanders said. "I am hopeful they will pass the guidelines."

Sanders' guidelines include setting aside money at both the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses for a strategic initiative, improving building maintenance and increasing faculty salaries.

The strategic initiative guideline calls for each campus to set aside 1 percent to 2 percent of their budgets to address the list of priorities Sanders released in December. The priorities include student recruitment and retention and examining the roles and workload of SIU faculty.

The second category of the guidelines would ask each campus representative group to set aside 3 percent to 5 percent of their budgets to address unexpected expenses or emergency situations which occur during the year.

The third part of Sanders' budget guidelines deals with setting aside money for deferred maintenance and keeping equipment up to date.

The fourth category in the budget plan addresses creating new assets for SIU, and part five includes a proposal to increase salaries of SIU staff based on work performance.

A.D. VanMeter, board chairman, said he cannot predict what action the board will take on the guidelines.

African-American women scheduling minority discussions

By James Lyon
DE Features Editor

African-American women could be called a double minority; not only do they face a white-majority society, but they also have to face a society dominated by men, an SIUC Women's Services coordinator says.

As a way to allow African-American women to voice their concerns and offer support to one another, Women's Services is creating an African-American Women's Support Group.

"African-American women are a minority on campus, as well as in society," Deborah Letarte, outreach and group counseling coordinator for Women's Services, said. "We want to address how that can affect a person's self-esteem and self-confidence."

Letarte said the problems minorities face on campus are an example of society as a whole. As a result, Letarte said some African-American women may feel they have no control.

"The minority groups on campus do not get a lot of attention," Letarte said. "As a part of that, there are not a lot of black women leaders today. Women may not feel they have a place on campus, and we want to provide an environment where they can discuss topics along with celebrating who they are."

Letarte said one of the differences in the African-American culture is that it is the only group brought to this country in the form of slavery. She said that has made a difference in the way the culture has assimilated.

Some of the topics Letarte said the group will address are how racism and sexism influence the way people look at women, historical facts that influence family structure and limitations that can harm a person's behavior.

"The media doesn't portray black men in a very positive image these days," Letarte said. "That kind of attention can also have side effects on women too. It can create additional burdens on relationships and self-awareness."

Letarte said there has been an extraordinary amount of change in the past few decades but said more change is needed. She said society needs more role models and a more diverse grouping in the business field for African Americans.

"There is a long way to go before there is an adequate reflection of the population in general," she said. "This support group is a way to help women deal with some of the problems they may be having and allow them to talk about how things could get better."

For more information on the African-American Women's Support Group, contact Women's Services at 453-3655.

Construction Alert

Motorists driving on the SIUC campus during spring break should take extra time and precaution due to construction that is scheduled during this time.

Construction workers will cut back the curb about ten feet at the intersection of Lincoln and Douglas drives to make it easier for Saluki Express buses to make turns.

The intersection is east of the Engineering Building and directly south of Neckers.

Same-sex marriage prohibition does not serve Illinois

IN HAWAII, A COURT CASE IS CAUSING A RUSH of legislation in the other 49 states. In 1993, the Hawaiian Supreme Court ruled that denying marriage licenses to three gay couples was discrimination on the basis of sex, not sexual orientation.

On Wednesday, an Illinois Senate committee cleared pending legislation, Senate Bill 1773, to change the Illinois Marriage and Dissolution of Marriage Act to prohibit "a marriage between two individuals of the same sex." Illinois' current law defines marriage as being between a man and woman, but does not prohibit same-sex marriage.

The pending legislation is now in line for a full Senate vote that is expected in two weeks.

The legislation is wrong. Our representatives are not in Springfield to legislate morality, deigning to tell the citizens what is and what isn't the correct sexual preference.

There are 19 states considering legislation that would refuse to recognize same-sex marriages. This legislation would leave the couples without the benefits heterosexual couples take for granted - joint social security benefits, tax deductions and insurance coverage.

But it is not these monetary issues that are the reason for the pending legislation. Sen. Pete Fitzgerald, R-Palatine, and the bill's sponsor said, "Most of us recognize that to describe any same-sex relationship as a marriage would be to destroy the notion of marriage as we know it."

"DESTROY THE NOTION" IS STRONG WORDING to use for a couple of people who want to spend the rest of their lives together. It seems hard to believe that two people are going to attempt to make a legal bond for the express purpose of destroying an institution.

It is illogical to think a sacred institution like marriage is even going to creak on its foundation, much less fall, simply because two men or two women walk under its arches.

Marriage has withstood wars, famines, disease and more recently a 50-percent divorce rate. Same-sex marriages hardly seem the force able to tear it down.

But if this legislation is passed, can it withstand a test in court? In Hawaii, the state must prove a compelling state interest for the denial of marriage licenses to same-sex couples. Most experts believe the state will not be able to make its case, and the court will uphold its ruling of constitutional discrimination. The case is expected to be heard in August.

But we cannot rely upon a legal remedy. To allow this legislation to pass is to separate citizens into classes, allowing some more rights than others, based upon nothing but a belief that their preferences are wrong.

And that is what this legislation is based upon, the judgement that another person does not deserve recognition, other than punishment, simply because that person's preference is different.

There is no logical reason for Senate Bill 1773. It lacks evidence to support it and it discriminates against a well-defined group of people. We urge the Illinois Senate not to give into hyperbole and false judgements and vote against this legislation.

Quotable Quotes

"To not pass this bill is to change our marriage laws fairly radically, if Hawaii changes its laws. If we were to act after Hawaii, I don't believe we could constitutionally strip marriages retroactively of those vested rights."

—Illinois State Senator Peter G. Fitzgerald, discussing consequences of not passing a bill to prohibit same-sex marriages.

Volunteers make lock-in a success

On March 2, the 10th annual STEP Lock-In conference held at the recreation Center went off without a hitch, thanks in large part to the tremendous support of the Saluki Volunteer Corps. This event, sponsored by the Adolescent Health Center, targets Jackson County sixth graders and aims to reduce teen pregnancy and violence, while promoting cooperation and unity with peers and parents. Nearly 100 sixth graders participated in this year's conference.

This year the lock-in took place at the same time as an SIU Track and Field meet. While we knew that the tracksters wouldn't interfere with what we were doing, we realized the temptation for the sixth graders to check out the track meet might be high.

The numerous volunteers provided to us through the Saluki Volunteer Corps really helped keep the kids where they were supposed to be. It's impossible to imagine this event being successful without their help.

The Adolescent Health Center would like to extend its sincerest thanks to the Saluki Volunteer Corps, community volunteers and area agencies for their continued assistance with the lock-in.

Your commitment to the young people of this country is a true inspiration and deserves the community's recognition.

Christians cannot live like rest of world

As a recently converted Christian, the state of modern churches and the "Christians" within them greatly concerns me. Many people claim to know Christ and yet do not obey Him. "By this we know that we have come to know Him: if we keep His commandments; the one who says 'I have come to know Him' and does not keep His commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him." (1 John 2: 3, 4)

"You cannot claim to be a Christian and live like the rest of the world. 'Do you not know that the wicked will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived: Neither the sexually immoral nor idolaters, nor adulterers nor male prostitutes nor homosexual offenders nor thieves nor the greedy nor the swindlers, will inherit the kingdom of God.' (1 Corinthians 6: 9, 10). If you are any one of these, then you live in the world and you will not inherit the kingdom of heaven."

"If the world hates you, keep in mind that it has hated (Jesus) first. If you belonged to the world, it would love you as its own: If I had not come and spoken to them, they would not be guilty of sin. Now, however, they have no excuse for their sin." (John 15: 18, 22)

"If you practice these ways, then you do not know Christ and therefore cannot should not call yourself a Christian. 'If we deliberately keep on sinning after we have received full knowledge of truth, no sacrifice for sins is left, but only a fearful expectation of judgement and of raging fire that will consume the enemies of God.' (Hebrews 10: 26, 27)

"You are an enemy of God 'Christians.' 'Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is near.' (Matthew 4: 17b)

Typecasting prevents good forest plan

While I agree with many of the points raised by Matt Gramse, I must rebut his arguments.

Gramse stated that "there is no accountable organization or anyone with forest ecology expertise" raising these questions. Is he ignoring the life works of Jean and Dick Graber, Scott Robinson and Jeff Hoover, or just discounting their years of study as less important than his own?

The proclamations of some emotional environmentalists do not discredit the science of all environmentalists any more than the refusal to admit that questions remain discounts the science of all forestry students.

I was offended most by his portrayal of environmentalists as "greedy goblins." It is not the conservationists who profit from logging. Environmentalists may differ, but they offer their time for free. Where is my profit Matt? Where is my greed?

I was one of the contributors to the 1992 Forest Service plan. The volumes of reading and hours of studying I put in make me far from "ignorant of what went into this document."

All scientists are not in agreement. The professors and industry spokesmen Mr. Gramse has been listening to are no more learned or respectable than those who have devoted their lives to science and say more research is needed.

I repeat the theme of my first letters. "Where is your study of neotropical migrant songbirds? Where are the results of mist netting studies of bats?"

My wife and I have been to the forest, devoted our lives to studying this ecosystem, observed songbird nests, documented the parasitism of cowbirds and spent hours with scientists who do not want to stop all logging, but insist that we need to know more.

Logging and forest management is important and will continue. But the opening of the last closed canopy in Southern Illinois will preclude any larger understanding.

Typecasting loggers or environmentalists is self-defeating. If intelligent students close their minds, the emotionalists and profiteers will have the final say.

How to submit a letter to the editor:

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 350 words. Students must identify themselves by class and major; faculty members by rank and department; non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Spy vs. spy, with journalists caught in a sticky situation

Los Angeles Times

My nonassociation with the CIA started 12 years ago. It was in the war-emptied ghost town of Tenancingo, El Salvador, that I was accused of being a CIA spy by local guerrillas whom I visited as administrator of a French humanitarian mission.

My first journalistic nonassociation with the CIA dates from Christmas week of 1991, which I spent in detention in Cuba, mostly in a squalid interrogation room where I was repeatedly asked by a major from the interior ministry why I wouldn't simply confess to spying for the CIA. I told him that he must be crazy; that the agency's own regulations had forbidden employing or posing as journalists since 1977, following a scandal involving CIA use of reporters.

I repeated the same arguments in 1993, after I was stopped at gunpoint with several other hacks in Pale, the so-called Bosnian Serb capital. We were all accused of being on a spy mission.

In 1994, I was accused of being a CIA spy because, with two other journalists, both Russian, I crossed the Abkhazia/Georgia border when there was some fighting going on. What would I be doing there if not spying for the CIA? My two fellow travelers had a bottle of vodka and — there is no limit to Russian resourcefulness — an open can of sardines in tomato sauce for an appetizer. In pouring rain, we carried these goodies into the checkpoint and suspicion disappeared with the sardines.

"We were all accused of being on a spy mission."

Anna Husarska
Special to the Los Angeles Times

Every time, I countered in good faith that the CIA did not employ journalists, nor did it have spies pretending to be journalists. So two weeks ago when I heard CIA Director John M. Deutch defend a long-standing policy allowing clandestine officers, under "extraordinary circumstances," to waive regulations and pose as reporters or to use reporters as informers, I felt kind of out-spooked.

Henceforth I will not be able to laugh off thugs, warlords and police officers in totalitarian states when they accuse me of being a CIA spy.

The Washington Post reported that whatever prohibitions existed against recruiting journalists "have never applied to foreign journalists, whom the CIA still looks to recruit, according to sources familiar with the matter."

If the stain of suspicion is on all journalists, then those foreign sources (official or not) who want to deny access to media will have an excuse to do so. And the truth is, policy-makers can ill afford to lose any reporting from the honest news media.

After many interviews with Western military and civilian intelligence personnel in Haiti and then in Bosnia, I realized that they often pool-pool journalism as unclassified information not worthy of their attention. In Haiti, for instance, the press reported consistently that the paramilitary organization called FRAPH were murderous thugs, a direct heir to the feared Tonton Macoutes. The CIA maintained that they were just another political party, and told that to the U.S. forces arriving there as peacekeepers in 1994. As a result, the Americans saw no need to neutralize FRAPH, tainting their democratic image with the locals.

I was not too surprised, either, when a U.S. Marine intelligence captain and a civilian intelligence expert from the Defense Department with whom I flew from Tuzla to Sarajevo in February assured me that the shuttle that they were taking from the airport would be stopping "right in front of the Hotel Serbia" in central Sarajevo. Now, to have a Hotel Serbia in the center of Sarajevo these days is about as likely as a Hotel Hanoi in Saigon in 1972. Stupidity is the most charitable interpretation on these large and small idiocies.

One can only hope that the intelligence community will make an intelligent decision and start using journalists' work, not their identities.

Hubble scope details picture of 9th planet

Newsday

WASHINGTON—Tiny Pluto, only a fuzzy dot of light to earth-bound telescopes, has been revealed by the Hubble Space Telescope to be ... a fuzzy dot with attitude.

Pluto, it turns out, is surprisingly diverse—with a ragged northern polar cap, a series of bright regions along its equator and hints of basins and impact craters.

To the untrained eye, the first-ever photos of Pluto's surface still show little more than some fuzzy white and dark blotches. But enthusiastic astronomers said the images released by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Thursday open a new window on an object that has been mysterious since its discovery in 1930.

The photos, taken when Pluto was some 3 billion miles away, reveal nearly a dozen distinctive features.

They show that Pluto—two-thirds the size of our moon—has more large-scale contrast than any other solid object in the outer solar system.

The bright regions are believed to be frost-covered areas dominated by frozen nitrogen. The dark regions are thought to be hydrocarbon residues from the breakdown of methane by the sun's rays.

As Pluto—which passed its closest point to the sun in 1989—heads to a colder, more distant region of the solar system, the planet's surface may become brighter and more uniform as more nitrogen and other gases "snow" out of the atmosphere, astronomers said.

"We're going to be able to watch the evolution of an entire planetary atmosphere, sort of in a controlled way, on a timescale of our own lifetime," said Bruce Margon, a University of Washington astronomer. "That's really a rare privilege."

Yoko Ono sends chess team to meet

Newsday

NEW YORK—Yoko Ono Thursday came to the rescue of a New York City high school chess team in distress, turning its desperation into a dream come true.

After reading about the students in a Newsday story, the widow of slain Beatles star John Lennon wrote out a personal check for $2,500 to the top-rated Edward R. Murrow High School team so it can participate in the state and national championship tournaments.

Her generosity means that the Brooklyn chess team will be able to pay the travel and tournament expenses after all.

The team members, national champs from 1992 to 1994, had given up hope of attending either tournament for lack of funds from the city's Board of Education.

Ono, an inveterate chess player, turned the team's blues into rock 'n' roll after reading about its financial woes in the newspaper.

"Yoko felt it funny, or ironical, that a school wouldn't have money for something as educational as chess," said Sam Havatov, the multimedia artist's assistant. "It's ridiculous. That's the whole point. That's what moved her to respond."

Ono, who has a new critically received album, "Rising," finds time to play chess virtually every day, Havatov said, adding that it relaxes and exercises her mind.

"You know, she likes to say that chess is the one thing that can keep kids off drugs for sure," Havatov said.

"I nominated him because he is probably the best teacher in the entire department," Hartmann said. "He seems to really care about his students. He is very energetic and popular with students."

She said the consensus of many students is that SIUC is losing one of its best teachers to economic politics.

"It's a shame that we're losing someone who is a wonderful teacher who really loves his job," Hartmann said. "Nobody seems to really pay attention to the importance of good teaching anymore."

Jacobs said he also is impressed with Gaston's teaching.

"Chemistry can be really dry and boring to a student," Jacobs said. "But the way he teaches it, you actually feel when you walk out of his class that you have learned something. He gives useful insight and is always there for students and has an open-door policy."

Gaston said he is looking for employment at other universities.

"Other schools are interested in how I teach the undergraduate lab," he said. "I let students discover things for themselves and piece together information, rather than telling them all the information."

"The fact that I wasn't appreciated by the faculty is sort of sad," he said. "But at least I know I was appreciated by the students. That says more than enough to me about how I did in terms of teaching."

RSOs have to go to Student Development to check their financial standing within the University and USG. She said the organizations did not have to do such extensive work in past years to apply for funding.

Scott Pfeiffer, USG chief of staff, said the executive committee did not think the RSOs had adequate time to fill out the forms with the previous deadline, which originally was today.

"The RSOs have had two weeks to collect the forms and fill them out," Pfeiffer said. "These RSOs need a little more time to finish the forms, and we (the committee) talked with Bottom and were informed that the extension will not interfere with the funding process."

Bottom said all RSOs requesting funding for next year have until March 19 at 4:30 p.m. to turn in the applications to the USG office on the third floor of the Student Center.

Marine shoots two officers with .45 pistol

Los Angeles Times

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif.—In the days before a Marine sergeant shot two high-ranking officers, one of the officers had provided verbal "motivation" to the sergeant for being a "stragglers" during a running exercise, a prosecutor told a magistrate Thursday.

Tuesday, Sgt. Jessie Quintanilla walked into the office of Lt. Col. Daniel Kidd, who had provided the "motivation," and told him, "Remember me (obscenity)?" and then shot him with a .45-caliber pistol, prosecutor Capt. Charles E. Feldmann said.

Quintanilla also shot Lt. Col. Thomas Heffner, Feldmann said, and then, with blood on his hands, calmly walked downstairs into a huge helicopter hangar and told other Marines:

"I just shot the x.o. (executive officer) and c.o. (commanding officer). I did it for the brotherhood and the brown side. This is only the beginning. We have a hit list. The brothers have been wronged and others are in the pen and more will die unless they are released."

The prosecutor did not say what Quintanilla, 28, a native of Guam, meant by the "brotherhood and the brown side." Civilian law enforcement officials said the terms are not gang terms but rather terms commonly heard by certain ethnic groups as expressions of solidarity and pride.

Military authorities are investigating whether Quintanilla was linked to gangs in Riverside, where he lived with his wife and son.

The prosecutor said Quintanilla had been a "straggler" during a running exercise when Kidd, the squadron's executive officer, dropped back from the pack and urged him to run faster.

Kidd died within minutes of the shooting. Heffner is in serious but stable condition at the base hospital.

Base spokesmen have said Quintanilla had earlier come to the attention of base authorities investigating gang activity involving Marines. Quintanilla, whose service record was spotless before the shooting, has a tear-drop tattoo at the corner of his eye, a tattoo often associated with gangs, particularly prison gangs.

Magistrate Maj. Jim Brown ruled that Quintanilla, pending the filing of charges, should remain in the brig rather than be allowed bail. Quintanilla, who did not speak at the 20-minute hearing, faces the death penalty if convicted, the prosecutor said.

took advantage of the Amnesty Program and have avoided any type of prosecution.

However, he said the students who did not opt for the Amnesty Program could face potential criminal prosecution and civil suits to recover the damages.

He said University administrative sanctions against the students who did not opt for the Amnesty Program could include loss of student employment, withholding registration, transcripts and diplomas and probation or dismissal from the University.

"Those that did not respond will be pursued based on the knowledge that the University has," he said.

David Cox, SIUC telecommunications manager, said he is not aware of any way students at the Carbondale campus could beat SIUC's telephone billing system because the switching system is different than SIUE's system.

Cox said at SIUC, students receive an authorization code that can be used only in their room.

He said although there has been some phone fraud at SIUC, this system makes it difficult for students to make unauthorized phone calls.

"We think we have taken all the necessary precautions to prevent it from happening here," he said.

Sam Jordan, SIUC police chief, said SIUC assigned two investigators to help with the interviewing of potential suspects at SIUE.

He said there has been improper usage of phones at SIUC but not of SIUE's magnitude.

Take an SIUC Course Anytime, Anywhere through the Individualized Learning Program

Individualized Learning Program courses carry SIUC residential credit applicable toward a degree.

ILP courses have no enrollment limits, and students can register throughout the semester. Students use a study guide developed by an SIUC instructor as the course framework and study at a time and place of their choosing. To register in an ILP course, on-campus students need to bring a registration form signed by their advisor to our office at Washington Square "C." Off-campus students should contact the ILP office directly. We must receive payment of $65 per credit hour when you register (Mastercard, Visa, Discover and American Express now accepted) or proof of financial aid. Call the Individualized Learning Program office at 536-7751 for further information.

SIUC professor recalls days as activist

Jane Adams participated in SDS, racial desegregation, women's movement

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

During the last 30 years, America has experienced racial desegregation, a sexual revolution and a women's movement.

Jane Adams was right in the middle of it all.

With her hair pulled back in a bun and her skirt brushing her ankles, she no longer has the casual appearance she had more than 25 years ago.

But Adams, an associate professor in anthropology, lights up when she hears about the celebration of Women's History Month, which is being celebrated at SIUC.

Adams said she has seen this history unravel and has played a part in the advancement of many historical movements, including the women's movement in the 1970s.

"Yeah, I guess I've been around for a while and seen a lot," she said.

"There aren't too many of us dinosaurs around to talk to." Adams grew up on a farm in Ava, about 20 miles north of Carbondale.

She said she has been an active participant in many of the movements which shaped the county but will not take any of the credit.

"I feel really lucky," she said. "I've been in the right place at the right time and done the right things. I feel it's been a real privilege in making good things happen."

She said when she was in high school, the school's band traveled to Du Quoin to go to the local roller rink for a band outing.

She said the establishment would not allow the African-American band members to come inside.

"We were outraged," she said. "We circulated a petition protesting the roller rink. It was the first real active stance I took about something. I just felt like it was something that needed to be done."

She said she was influenced by her family's involvement in the '50s with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"My father took an active stance in minority hiring," she said.

"At the time, anyone involved with the racial movements was considered a communist, and my father was checked out," Adams said.

Adams attended SIUC in the fall of 1963.

The following summer, she traveled to Mississippi to help register blacks to vote as part of the historic Freedom Summer, and she said her outlook changed because of it.

"All of these people came together to make a difference," Adams said.

"It showed me that people can change history, and we don't have to accept things as they are," she said.

mer 1965 and became the secretary for the Students for a Democratic Society, a political organization that worked for nuclear disarmament and other peace movements.

Adams said women began to become empowered in the early 1970s with the age of the sexual revolution.

She said women finally began to raise their consciousness toward their social situation.

"All these young women who were raised on the words of Dr. Spock thought the world was their oyster," she said.

"And they didn't understand why they couldn't have it."

During this time, Adams began compiling information for a survey on the status of women in society.

She said at the time there was no literature about women.

"There simply was no literature on women," she said.

"We were inventing it. No one up to that point was talking about being a woman, so I was dealing with something that had nothing written about it."

Adams attended a national council in June 1967 and helped write the first public document put out by an organization that put women's liberation on the main agenda.

She said that document is the proudest moment of her career.

"Of all the things of my life, I'm proud to be a part of that," she said.

"From that moment, people wanting to organize had a direction to go. The building of the Women's Center (408 W. Freeman) even came out of this time period," she said.

Adams said the attitudes of students have changed drastically throughout the years.

She said students today have no strong movements, so they have taken past accomplishments for granted.

"Living human beings created the world students live in today," she said.

"It just didn't happen. When I was in school, I don't think I even had a female professor."

"They need to realize these past efforts."

Dole's victory robs primaries of media hype

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—For one brief, shining moment, the reporters and the junkies had a heckuva horse race.

Then Bob Dole had to go ruin it all by sweeping the Junior Tuesday states. And while few are ready to declare the Republican presidential race officially over — there are lots of delegates to be decided, states to be stumped, expense accounts to be exploited — the media establishment knows that the thrill is gone.

The Kansas senator is "well on his way to this nomination," NBC's Tim Russert told viewers. "It's hard to see how he loses," said CBS's Bob Schieffer. "He looks almost as inevitable as the sunrise," R.W. Apple said in Wednesday's New York Times. "It's all over," Al Hunt declared on CNN.

And it's almost five months to the August conventions.

"Personally, my wife is relieved, but I don't know what I'm going to do for the next five months," said Newsweek political reporter Tom Rosenstiel. "Normally, we make nuisances of ourselves, stomping around the office like we're too important to be there."

The adrenaline, clearly, is still pumping.

Can it really be back to Whitewater, the budget and computer analyses of "Primary Colors"?

In the coming weeks, campaign reporters may wistfully recall the days of watching plaid-shirted Lamar Alexander play the piano; the truly hopeless might even miss Dick Lugar.

A week ago, the scribes were feverishly tracking the point spreads and ad buys in crucial battleground states.

Now they're left with such scintillating scenarios as the battle over the party platform.

Rik Palieri will perform his folk music tonight at Cousin Andy's.

Folk singer brings music, free coffee to Cousin Andy's

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Southern Illinois literally will get a taste of Vermont when folk singer/songwriter Rik Palieri brings his music and free coffee to Cousin Andy's tonight.

Palieri started playing a five-stringed banjo when he was 15 and began touring with Pete Seeger in his 20s, he said. His music focuses on current issues, such as homelessness and the problems faced by Vietnam veterans, Palieri said.

"Folk music is a reflection of the community," he said. "That is why I feel compelled to write the songs that I write. It is a reflection of yesterday's music and today's music."

Palieri said the concert will include songs played on guitar, a four-stringed banjo and the Polish bagpipes.

He said he is touring the country promoting his latest CD, "The Music In Me." The Green Mountain Roasting Co., a Vermont coffee company, is sponsoring the tour.

The tour came as a response he got from the playlist he posted on the Internet in a folk forum, Palieri said. Some radio stations found out about his music on the Internet and are playing it, he said.

"This tour is a getting-to-know-you tour," he said. "I am shaking the hands of some of the deejays who have been playing my stuff."

Not all of his music is related to current issues, he said. Palieri said he wrote a song about Elvis sightings and a song about different kinds of coffee. One song, "Praising For Gold," is about a singer/songwriter much like himself, he said.

"Eyes filled with wonder/Hair spun to silver/He keeps on courting the muse/With lady beside him/Bundle-stiff troubadour/Dancing in vagabond shoes/With a banjo and a fiddle/Squeeze a joke in the middle/They'll sing until the last story is told."

Jim Mueller, a local storyteller, will open up for Palieri with a few stories.

Mueller said he has loved stories since he was a kid and his father used to read to him, occasionally making up his own stories. Mueller took that love and began telling his own stories, he said.

"I always enjoyed making kids laugh," Mueller

Grocery store provides virtual reality shopping

The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE—If you've got a computer, you'll have a grocer.

Metro Food Markets, a chain with 12 stores in the Baltimore area, plans to introduce on-line grocery shopping this fall. It will become the first grocery chain to use a sophisticated multimedia program that lets shoppers cruise a "virtual" store, filling a "virtual" grocery cart with real products that they can either pick up or have delivered.

John Ryder, Metro's president, announced the company's plans in an interview Monday. He said he expects the service to be especially appealing to two-career couples with busy schedules.

"This is real. It's just a matter of when and how you do it. PC-based shopping is here," Ryder said.

Metro will offer the service in partnership with Market Street Telemedia Corp., a West Chester, Pa., company founded by Annapolis natives Robb Buller and William E. Aherne III.

Buller said he and his partner believe there are now enough home computer users to make their service a viable business. He cited Dataquest Inc. estimates that 29 million U.S. households will have multimedia computers by the end of this year.

Jeff Metzger, publisher of the trade publication Food World, said a smattering of grocery chains around the country have experimented with on-line shopping, but he was unaware of any that used a multimedia technology. "Overall there has not even been anything close to a trend set on this," he said.

Market Street's shopping program, which its founders demonstrated Monday, uses a combination of CD-ROM and on-line technologies to sidestep the limitations of each.

All-Ag banquet draws largest crowd in years

By Tracy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The College of Agriculture's All-Ag banquet and 40th anniversary was a success in bringing back alumni and former staff and awarding students for their achievements, the college's associate dean says.

Students, alumni and faculty — 280 in all — attended the banquet, which took place March 1. Robert Arthur, associate dean of the College of Agriculture, said.

"It was the largest crowd we've had in several years," Arthur said. Awards were given to alumni, students and faculty, Arthur said.

The Outstanding Teacher Award was given to John Burk, teaching assistant in the Forestry department, and the Faculty Service Award was given to Steven Kraft, professor in agri-business economics.

The Outstanding Alum Award was given to George Moeller, and the Outstanding Young Alum Award was given to Dana McCleary.

The Excellence in Teaching Award was given to Robert Arthur, who said he was very honored.

"The award was special because it was the first year ever given, and it was created by the students," he said. "I was selected and nominated by the students. It was especially rewarding that students have that much feeling in my doing a good job."

The student awards included the Outstanding Club Award, given to the Student Dietetic Association. The runner-up club was the Agricultural Communicators of Tomorrow.

The Outstanding Junior Award was given to Mollie Williams, a junior in agri-business economics from Carmi.

Williams said she was happy to get the award. She said she knew she was a candidate for the award but was nervous when she was announced the winner. She received a plaque and a $75 award from Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity.

"More important than anything is the fact that I got the award," Williams said. "It represents three years of hard work."

The runner-up for the Outstanding Junior Award was Julie Donnelly.

The Outstanding Senior Award went to Brian Myers, and the runner-up was Eric Kuznecan, a senior in agri-business economics from Griggsville.

Kuznecan said he was happy to receive the award.

Arthur said this year's All-Ag banquet pleased him.

"A lot of alums were here who had not been back for many years," Arthur said. "I was impressed enough that I think we will see some of them again."

"I've been here for 19 All-Ag banquets, and this one ranks within the top two or three."

Epidemic in Indonesia kills 300; victims cough blood before dying

Newsday

A mysterious epidemic has broken out in a remote part of Indonesia, killing 300 people in an outbreak in which the victims cough up blood before dying.

Information is scarce because the area is so remote, but speculation from Indonesian health authorities in Jakarta and international experts points to anthrax, staphylococcus, dengue hemorrhagic fever and other possible microbes.

As of last week, the most recent information from the affected area reported 229 confirmed deaths and at least another 80 suspected deaths due to what the people are calling "the pig disease." The deaths occurred in the province of Irian Jaya, the Indonesian side of the island of New Guinea.

Because reports indicate there may be a link between wild pigs and the human epidemic, sources at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention speculated that anthrax, a bacterial disease, might be the culprit.

Anthrax can be treated with penicillin, but controlling it can be difficult because the bacteria go into a dormant state and move about in the air, soil and water with near-infinity.

Freelance photographer drowns at party

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—A freelance photographer fell into the Washington Channel and drowned as he took pictures at Mayor Marion Barry's 60th birthday party Wednesday night on the District of Columbia waterfront, police and witnesses said.

Johnny Johnson, 66, a retired employee of the D.C. Department of Human Services who was widely known in the city's civic and political circles, disappeared in the channel's murky water off the Odyssey cruise ship docked along the city's Southwest waterfront. Twenty minutes after he fell in, Johnson's body was pulled from the water. He was taken to George Washington University Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 7:35 p.m., a hospital spokeswoman said.

Barry, informed of the accident on the way to the party, was visibly shaken when he arrived shortly after 8 p.m. with his wife, Cora Masters Barry. The scheduled dinner cruise aboard the Odyssey was to be a birthday celebration that doubled as a fund-raiser for his summer job program, a hallmark of his administration. But what was supposed to be "Jazz for Jobs" turned into a somber affair. Guests eventually were allowed on the ship and dinner was served, but the cruise was canceled.

Johnson was taking pictures on the deck of the Odyssey. He was walking backward, snapping photos of arriving guests, when he stepped through an 18-inch gap between the rails of the boat and the gangplank. Police Chief Larry D. Soulsby said.

A man standing at the top of the gangplank lunged for Johnson as he fell backward, but the photographer was beyond his grasp, witnesses said. One person standing nearby immediately threw a life preserver to Johnson, who grabbed it but could not hold on, Soulsby said.

D.C. police and fire department divers were called, but it was at least 20 minutes before they were able to find Johnson's body, which they said was beneath the Odyssey.

Several witnesses said the gangplank had been moved to one side of the boat's entrance, leaving the gap. After the accident, it was centered in the entrance, leaving a smaller opening between the railings.

Teens still eager to get behind wheel

The Baltimore Sun

TOWSON, Md.—Amanda Marcus Rakoff knew she could do it. She'd conquered the perils of parallel parking, aced the tricky three-point turnaround and mastered the intricacies of backing up.

Now nothing stood between the Towson High School junior and her long-coveted freedom except The Test.

So last Friday, on her 16th birthday, Amanda headed to the Motor Vehicle Administration branch office for a classic American rite of passage: getting her driver's license. And she was already anticipating how great it would be as she stood in line at the MVA.

"I will drive to the party tonight, and I'll drive tomorrow, and the next day and the next day and the next day," Amanda declared.

Scientists discover way to clone sheep

The Washington Post

The endless stream of identical sheep envisioned by insomniacs just became a lot more real. Researchers in Scotland have developed a technique for cloning unlimited numbers of genetically indistinguishable sheep.

Only five identical lambs have been created so far, and three died in the first days of life.

But scientists said the success could open the door to mass production of gene-altered animals with desirable traits, such as sheep with better wool or pigs with "humanized" organs suitable for transplantation into people.

In theory, researchers said, the technique could also be used to clone human embryos.

Legal restrictions preclude such experiments on embryos in the United Kingdom, and in this country, federal funding cannot be used to support such research. No one has yet discovered how to make duplicates of adults from individual cells.

"It's very impressive," said David White, a lecturer at Cambridge University in England and co-founder of Imutran, a British biotechnology company that is developing genetically engineered animals. "It's a big advance."

For years, scientists have been creating lines of genetically identical laboratory animals such as mice and rabbits by tinkering with embryo cells in laboratory dishes. But the technique often fails and is only partially complete after one generation, requiring additional work to get the desired trait established in a second generation.

Most important, it has never worked in larger animals such as sheep or pigs.

In Thursday's issue of the journal Nature, Keith H.S. Campbell, Ian Wilmut and their colleagues at the Roslin Institute in Edinburgh describe a different approach to cloning animals.

They started with a 9-day-old sheep embryo, made of a hundred or so cells, which they removed from a pregnant ewe. Cells in such early embryos have not yet begun to differentiate into the kind of organ or tissue they will eventually become, and each contains all the genes necessary to make an entire animal.

The team allowed these cells to divide repeatedly in culture dishes. In less than a week, thousands of the identical cells filled several dishes.

Separately, the researchers gave hormone shots to female sheep to induce the release of eggs from their ovaries, much as fertility specialists induce ovulation in women trying to become pregnant.

IBM under investigation for alleged payoffs

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—International Business Machines is in the middle of a nightmare scenario.

It is being investigated by the Justice Department, the U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York and the Securities and Exchange Commission regarding alleged payoffs in Argentina to obtain a $250 million contract to supply computer systems to Banco de la Nación.

In Argentina, a federal magistrate and the Argentine IRS are investigating the same allegations, which have cost both senior bank officials and IBM Argentina employees their jobs. In addition, if IBM officials in Argentina are found guilty of bribery of government officials, they could go to jail and IBM could lose its contract.

"This is the kind of case where when the roof falls in, it really

"This is the kind of case where if the roof falls in, it really falls in."

Joseph P. Griffin,

Head of the international department at the law firm Morgan, Lewis and Bockius ly falls in," said Joseph P. Griffin, head of the international department at the law firm Morgan, Lewis & Bockius.

Foreign companies frequently make the kinds of payments that are being investigated in Argentina, U.S. business executives say. Responding to such complaints, U.S. officials warned foreign governments yesterday to clamp down on the practice or face trade sanctions here.

The investigation of IBM is looking for possible violations of the 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, which made payoffs by U.S. companies to foreign government or corporate officials or other intermediaries illegal. Some legal experts say the number of such cases will likely increase as global business competition grows. But these cases are very difficult for U.S. law enforcement agencies to prosecute.

A second case underway involves Boeing Co., which is under investigation in Canada and the United States over allegations that its Canadian subsidiary paid a bribe of $1 million to a Malaysian official as part of a contract to sell airplanes there. A spokesman for Boeing has said the company is looking into the allegations, but believes they have no merit.

The issue of foreign bribes "will probably be one of the most significant white-collar crime issues of the next 10 years," said Laurence Ungerleider, former Justice Department official and an attorney at Kirkland & Ellis. "But it's not being driven by the Justice Department; it's being driven by the global economy."

With government-owned entities going public in countries such as China and Indonesia and more U.S. companies entering new marketplaces abroad, the number of bribery cases is bound to rise, said several experts in the field.

In part, this is because as competition increases, there is more incentive for foreign companies to allege bribery and possibly get the contracts for themselves.

Privately, some U.S. executives defend the practice of payoffs to foreign officials on the grounds that they are standard practice for competitors from countries such as France, Japan and Germany.

Said one government official who deals with the act: "You've got to wonder what the hell goes on in Russia, where you can't get from here to there without paying a guy on the corner who has an Uzi."

But even if foreign bribery by U.S. companies is on the increase, Justice Department officials acknowledge it is extremely difficult to pursue.

Investigators must travel overseas, where there can be language difficulties, and also must be able to find some involvement by executives in the United States in order for Justice to have jurisdiction.

The investigators encounter front companies, false paper trails and dozens of inventive ways to hide

Navy admiral memorialized in museum

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Arleigh Burke was a fierce fighting sailor who grew into one of the savviest of our calculating cold warriors. Adm. Burke, who died at 94 on Nov. 7 Year's Day, is remembered in a far-too-modest exhibit at the Navy Museum.

Although given pride of place at the entrance to the museum — which Burke founded — the exhibit exhibits none of the force and depth of the man it memorializes.

It's essentially an assemblage of stock photos and souvenirs, plus a clumsy and cloying 1961 Navy Department film that's truly a museum piece.

What's missing is any sense of the man himself.

"31-Knot Burke" looms so large in naval history that it was unthinkable to name the newest class of destroyers, the type of ship in which he first won fame, after anyone else.

But no American naval vessel had ever been named after a living person, and as DDG-51 took shape on the ways at Maine's Bath Iron Works the tough old sailor just kept going and going and going.

So the Navy abandoned ironclad precedent, and in 1991 Burke became the first man ever to live to see the launching of an American warship bearing his own name.

Most of the highlights of Burke's life are to be found in the exhibition, but they're presented in a laconic and unfocused fashion that Burke never would have tolerated on one of his fast, happy ships.

After his retirement, Burke became the co-founder of a foreign policy think tank dedicated to keeping the Free World's eye on the ball in the great game against communism, which was won in large part because of the precisely graduated power projected by the modern, flexible Navy he built.

It's not the dull drabness of the display that would irk Burke.

He was a man of large ego but he was not vain (he specified that his epitaph read simply, "Sailor").

What would bother him is that in putting the exhibit together the museum lost sight of its main mission.

The institution is dedicated to honoring sailors, yes, and showcasing maritime history, yes, and preserving historical hardware, arms and artifacts, of course.

patience in terms of shot selection, especially on the inside.

"We really took care of the basketball," Scott said.

"We had tremendous shot selection. Hudson had 15 and Slater had 14, so that's 29 points from our interior."

SIUC also demonstrated a well balanced defensive game against the Shockers as well. Scott said the Salukis played a tough defensive game in both halves.

"Defensively we were very tough for about a twenty minute stretch — from the second ten minutes of the first half and the first ten minutes of the second half," Scott said.

Southern's balanced defense contained WSU's forward Tootie Shaw, one of the most potent scorers in the conference.

Shaw's normal scoring average of 12 points per game was shattered as she was held scoreless in the first half, and only managed to garner three points in the second.

Scott said shutting down the Shockers' big gun definitely altered the course of the game.

"It was a great defensive effort inside," she said.

"Heather Slater was on her (Shaw) most of the ball game. When we take away that from them,

"We had tremendous shot selection. Hudson had 15 and Slater had 14, so that's 29 points from our interior."

*Cindy Scott
women's basketball coach*

it certainly helps a great deal."

Next on Southern's agenda will be Illinois State, who beat Bradley 80-75 in overtime yesterday.

The Salukis have a score to settle with Illinois State, who beat the Salukis Feb. 22 at Redford Arena, costing SIUC a share of a MVC crown.

Scott said it doesn't matter who the Salukis play at this point, as long as they continue to win.

"We really don't care (who they play)," Scott said.

"They are talented, and they wouldn't be where they are without some great players. We're just going to get their game film and get home and start breaking it down."

Tonight's tip-off is 6.

consistency."

Auld said she has not planned a strategic approach for the teams they will face but believes the team has a legitimate opportunity for success.

"We have the capability of coming away with a winning record," she said. "I want the girls to stay focused and be mentally prepared for every match."

Auld said she is looking forward to her team playing with a positive frame of mind to help motivate each other.

"You have to focus, concentrate, keep yourself up mentally and encourage your team," she said. "In tennis, it's only you and your opponent."

Auld said she has been pleased with her team's performance so far this season.

"We've played well so far and I am never concerned about this time of the year I look for end results," Auld said. "I look for improvement from weekend to weekend."

The netters will host the University of Tennessee-Martin March 26.

Jumpers

jumpers who could win the title, but said he tries to set himself up in a position to "peak" at the big meets.

"When you get to a championship meet, the winner is whoever jumps well that day," he said.

"If I don't win, that's OK. If I lose and still jump high, I can take it. If I jump low and lose, then I will be upset with myself."

The opportunity to get into the 1996 Olympics is already present for Wright, but he said doing well at the Indoor Championships will give him more confidence going into the Olympic Trials.

"Basically, all this (the NCAA Indoor Championships) has to do is act as a springboard going into the outdoor season," Wright said.

Wright believes his success in the indoor season will translate into high marks for the outdoor season.

"I always jump higher outdoors," Wright said.

"I anticipate some great heights in the outdoor season this year, but I hope to jump higher than 7-4 1/2 this weekend."

For Kalogerou, a native of Kato Lakatania, Cyprus, making the 1996 Indoor Track and Field Championships will be a new experience, but he said it is an experience he is looking forward to.

"It would mean a lot (going to the NCAA Indoor Championships) because from what I hear, it's everyone's dream to be All-American or go to nationals," Kalogerou said.

Kalogerou said he believes he has a distinct advantage over other jumpers who have been to the national championships before.

"I think that I have an advantage over the other jumpers because I don't know what it means (to compete at the national level) so I don't have any pressures on me," Kalogerou said.

Kalogerou said he has a good chance of making the Cyprus Olympic team as a result of his performances at Southern.

"I have to jump 7-3 3/4 to get onto the Cyprus Olympic Team," he said.

"I've been training all year to do that. It's my optimum goal to go to the Olympic Games."

Kalogerou added that finishing in the top eight at the Nationals and surpassing the 7-3 3/4 mark to go to the Olympics on the same day would be nice.

Like Wright, Kalogerou feels his success indoors will aid in his outdoor performances.

"In the outdoor season, you're more confident, but it's a long season and you don't know what's going to happen," Kalogerou said.

SIUC men's track and field coach Bill Cornell said he expected both jumpers to do well at the national championships.

"Cameron definitely has a shot at winning the championship," Cornell said. "This is his final meet as a college athlete, so he definitely wants to go out on a high note."

"This is quite an honor for Neophytos," Cornell said. "I would love to see him finish in the top six and achieve All-American status."

Women's golf team looks to sharpen skills at LSU Invite

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The more challenging the course and competition, the better the women of the SIUC golf team play.

Diane Daugherty, SIUC women's golf coach, said her team performance in their first match of the season was not spectacular, but playing on the marshy course improved the team skills.

"I think it wasn't a fabulous debut for spring, but there was a bright spot in that we've played our hardest course for the season," Daugherty said.

She said her team suffered from a lot of penalty strokes and high numbers.

The team tied for tenth place out of 19 teams at the College of Charleston Invitational March 4-5.

"When you play top opponents you get better, and that is what we'll be doing at LSU."

*Diane Daugherty
women's golf coach*

"It's respectable, but it's not where we want to be," Daugherty said.

"I expected to try and finish in the upper half."

Daugherty said the team had good practices in February, but lately the weather enabled the team to practice and that had an effect on their performance.

"The other teams were southern teams, and they had an advantage of having good weather to get prepared," she said.

SIUC will travel to Louisiana State University to compete with Alabama University, Auburn University, Florida State University, Ole Mississippi University and LSU March 15-17.

"Hope we will play some great golf," she said.

"When you play top opponents you get better, and that is what we'll be doing at LSU."

Daugherty said she would like for the team to practice this weekend in preparation for the match weather permits it.

"Every time we play it makes our team better," she said. "It's just a matter of us getting out and playing."

Giants closer to obtaining services of Chris Spielman

Newsday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—New York Giants General Manager George Young says much of free agency simply is a matter of swapping comparable players, and that is what the Detroit Lions and Giants moved a step closer to doing Thursday.

The Lions signed free agent Michael Brooks, who started at middle linebacker for the Giants last season, to a two-year contract. The Giants, meanwhile, continued negotiations with the agent for Chris Spielman.

Spielman said late Thursday that he believes the three teams pursuing him are the Giants, Green Bay Packers and Buffalo Bills and said he would be comfortable with any of the three if the money is right. He is believed to be seeking about $2 million per season.

If those are the only teams involved, the Giants might be in a good position. The Bills re-signed inside linebacker Mark Maddox this week and used much of their cap room to sign receiver Quinn Early Wednesday. The Packers are worried about Spielman's coverage limitations and might not meet his asking price, particularly after signing defensive tackle Santana Dotson Thursday.

Nomo looks to repeat 1995 performance with less hype

The Los Angeles Times

VERO BEACH, Fla.—The Los Angeles Dodgers front office was in high gear. It was time to spread the word that Hideo Nomo had signed his contract and news outlets from Vero Beach to Tokyo were being called.

Interpreters were summoned and camera lights were set up. The Far East was waiting.

There was just one little problem.

The guest of honor was missing.

This was headline news in Japan—Nomo had just signed the most lucrative contract ever given to a Dodger player after his rookie season—but he shrugged and headed for the weight room, leaving instructions that he wouldn't be available until work was done.

"My job is to play baseball and to help the Dodgers win the World Series," Nomo said through his interpreter. "That's what's significant to me, not some contract."

Nomo considers news conferences a pain, anyway. "You want to talk to a star player? Go talk to Mike Piazza, Eric Karros and Ramon Martinez. Nomo just wants to be one of the guys."

The happiest day of Nomo's baseball career will be the day he pitches, is upstaged by a teammate, and no reporter bothers to talk to him. He grins at the thought of that.

There have been 82 press credentials issued here to Japanese reporters, who chronicle his every move.

When Nomo pitched an intrasquad game last week, 30 Japanese journalists were charting every pitch.

When the working day ends, Nomo is besieged by autograph requests. The fans line up as if they were waiting to ride the Matterhorn at Disneyland. The Dodgers station someone from their publicity department to break off the session after 10 minutes and the fans then berate the Dodger official while Nomo scurries off to the clubhouse.

And Nomo cannot live away from the Dodgetown complex, as most veterans do. He would like to get a beach condo, but fans and reporters would stake it out.

"It would be too crazy," he said.

"It's crazy what he (Nomo) has to go through each day. I can't even imagine it... I mean, you know it's bad when he can't even get away from the players who are asking for autographs!"

Todd Worrell
Dodgers' relief pitcher

The Dodgers, trying to keep up with it all, have hired an interpreter and a public relations assistant for Nomo. They are printing their notes in Japanese, as well as English, and soon will issue an abridged version of their media guide in Japanese.

"It's crazy what he has to go through each day," relief pitcher Todd Worrell said. "I can't even imagine it... I mean, you know it's bad when he can't even get away from the players who are asking for autographs."

Nomo also is subjected to rumors and innuendo. Some of the Japanese tabloids will print whatever they hear, whether it's true or fiction.

"Some of the things they say," Nomo said, "I don't understand how they can say that. It makes you very private. You guard your privacy with your life."

Nomo was mobbed by 1,000 fans at Narita International Airport when he returned home last fall. He became only the second athlete in Japanese history to receive the Kikuchi Award, given to a person instrumental in introducing the Japanese culture to other countries. NHK-TV of Japan produced two shows on Nomo that drew audiences of more than 20 million.

Instead of celebrating New Year's Eve, many Japanese stayed home to watch a 12-hour special on Nomo. It was the longest televised show on an individual in Japanese history.

A high school in Japan collected 20,000 recyclable cans to create a mural, 12 by 15 meters.

And in Jiyu Kokuminsha's annual, "New Japanese and Popular Words award," Nomo was the most popular name or word used in 1995.

"It's like he was the first guy to walk on the moon or the first guy to climb Mount Everest," said Don Nomura, Nomo's agent. "I'm happy for Hideo because this is what he always wanted. ... You'll never see anything like this happen again in Japan... because Nomo was the first."

Nomo earned about $12 million in endorsements during the off-season, and has turned down nearly $10 million in other endorsement opportunities. He can be seen four or five times an hour on Japanese prime-time TV, selling everything from coffee to life insurance.

Toyota announced that sales in Japan have increased by 110 percent since he did his first car commercial.

More? There have been 12 books published in Japan about Nomo since September.

"I've fulfilled a big dream by pitching in the major leagues, and good things happened to me as a result," Nomo said.

The scrutiny may be just as intense this season—particularly in light of Nomo's three-year, $4.3 million contract—but the staggering pressure that besieged Nomo last year should ease.

"My God, after what he had to go through last year, I think this season will be a lot easier for Hideo," Manager Tom Lasorda said.

"Last year, he didn't know what he was going to do. There was always a doubt. Can I do it?"

"He knows he can do it now, and that should make things so much easier for him."

Nomo's even temperament may help him through whatever is coming. His teammates swear they never have seen him lose his temper. The only time he shows annoyance is when reporters are camped in front of his locker.

Salukis take first step to NCAA tourney with 83-65 win

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

If a team puts five players in double figures and limits an opponent's leading scorer to just three points, chances are it's going to walk away with a win.

That is just what the SIUC women's basketball team did against Wichita State University yesterday in the opening round of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament.

Southern beat the Shockers handily with an 83-65 thrashing in the Knapp Center in Des Moines, Iowa, to advance to tonight's semifinal action.

Yesterday's victory was the Salukis' third over the Shockers this season, proving how hungry Southern is to win the tournament championship.

"There is nothing more that these kids want than to win a conference championship," said

Saluki coach Cindy Scott.

The game turned out to be all Southern from beginning to end as the Salukis' offense exploded, and jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the game's opening minutes, never looking back.

With sophomore forward Theia Hudson's powerful inside attack feeding off of senior guard Nikki Gilmore's outside game, Southern built a commanding 43-27 lead at the break, with six Salukis on the scoreboard.

"They got a little bit off at the half, and for us to be up 16 at half-time was a little bit unbelievable," an elated Scott said. "I thought there were spells in the first half where we were very good defensively and making great decisions with the basketball on the offense end."

Adding insult to injury, the Shockers' offense went 4:00 minutes without a bucket, as SIUC's offense took off with an 11-0 run. The Shockers shot 34 percent from the field compared to the Salukis' 50 percent.

The second half of action turned out to be a mirror image of the first as Southern's offense continued to gain momentum on a struggling Shockers defense.

Midway through the half, SIUC built a commanding 21-point lead to bury any hopes of a Shockers comeback.

As they have done all year, the offensive tandem of Gilmore and junior guard Kasia McClendon paced Southern's offensive attack. Gilmore, who had 3 treys on the afternoon, added 17 points, while McClendon led all players with 19. Hudson added 15 points, just ahead of senior forward Heather Slater's 14, and senior forward LaQuanda Chavours' 10.

Scott said her team demonstrated a tremendous amount of South Carolina matches prepare netters for MVC

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Determination, togetherness and competitiveness are the main ingredients that make the SIUC women's tennis team successful, coach Judy Auld said.

"They do not like to lose as individuals nor as a team," Auld said. "They like challenges and they never back down."

The women interact with one another well and they support each other on and off the court Auld says.

"They are not determined to win for self, but for the team," she said. "When someone is down it seems someone always responds and rises to the occasion."

The team is preparing for a tournament at South Carolina March 10-14, where they will play six single and three double matches against Murray State University.

Virginia Commonwealth University, University of Richmond, Campbell University and Georgetown University.

Sanem Berksoy, who usually plays at position number three has stepped up to the number two spot replacing Molly Card who is out due to a badly sprained ankle, said competing against the teams will be good experience.

"Those matches will prepare us for the conference teams," Berksoy said.

SIUC begins conference action in April.

Auld said Virginia Commonwealth and the University of Richmond have quality tennis teams and they will be the netters' most difficult opponents.

"Both schools have solid teams and they will be the hardest matches," she said. "We are going to have to play very good tennis." I want the girls to work on their intensity level, play the key points well and keep up the

Pair of SIUC high jumpers qualify for NCAA meet

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Two members of the SIUC men's Track and Field team have the title of All-American within their grasp, but just being All-American may not be enough for either of them.

Both senior high jumper Cameron Wright and sophomore high jumper

Neophytos Kalogerou have qualified for the NCAA Indoor Championships, which take place in Indianapolis, Ind., March 8-9, by jumping 7-4 1/2 and 7-3 respectively. The two jumpers accomplished the jumps at the USA TF/Saluki Invitational Feb. 17.

SIUC men's track and field coach Bill Cornell said that out of the 14 jumpers who will be competing for the national title, the Southern duo will have to be among the top eight jumpers in order to receive All-American honors.

Cornell added that Wright is tied for third and Kalogerou is ranked seventh among college athletes in the nation.

According to Wright, who is already a four-time All-American, he wants to add a national championship to his list of accomplishments.

"If I won the national championship, that would be a dream come true," Wright said. "I come out here (to the Recreation Center) to work and lift for one reason. That is because I'm going for a national championship."

Wright added that confidence is the key to his success.

"I have never gone into a national championship as confident as I am for this one," Wright added. "I know I'm not ranked first, but I don't care. I know what I'm going to have to jump to win."

"I am prepared to take care of Cameron Wright and that's my best chance of winning the nationals."

Wright said there are a lot of other

The SIUC baseball team travels to Las Vegas, Nev. and San Antonio, Texas over spring break.

The Salukis will battle the University of Nevada-Las Vegas (15-6, and ranked 25th in the nation by the USA Today Baseball Weekly) poll March 9, 10, and 11, with games against the University of San Diego on March 11 and 12.

March 13-16 the Salukis cruise down to San Antonio, Texas to participate in the San Antonio Tournament which includes Notre Dame (ranked 29th), Oral Roberts (ranked 25th in last weeks Collegiate Baseball poll), and the University of Indiana.

SIUC is currently 4-2 on the season, and is coming off a three-game sweep of the Saluki/Best Inns Classic March 1-3.

SIUC's softball team will travel to Indiana, Stetson, and Florida State over the break.

The Salukis will play at Indiana March 11, Stetson (DeLane, Fla.) March 13, and in the Florida State University Invitational March 15-17.

Softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer's squad is 0-1 on the season, with a 3-2 loss to Eastern Illinois University March 4.

The Phoenix Suns fined power forward Charles Barkley $7,000 Wednesday for making disparaging remarks about the officials after the Suns' against the Dallas Mavericks on Sunday.
